MESSAGE FROM TRAVIS HERNANDEZ

TCSO Operations Specialist Nick Farmer presented on International Over-the-Road Truckers Day. The presentation focused on two of the most common types of serious injuries: head injuries and back injuries. The presentation reinforced the need for truckers to wear seatbelts and the importance of proper core strength and flexibility in reducing the risk of injury. The presentation concluded with a discussion on the role of the police and emergency medical services in responding to truck-related accidents.

The second anniversary of the decision to adopt the International Trucking Safety Conference's 1999 Guidelines on the Prevention of Head Injuries in the Trucking Industry took place on May 4. TCSO led two joint training exercises in May for agencies that respond together, training on rescue and recovery measures. The training focused on two of the most common types of serious injuries: head injuries and back injuries.

Mental Health Awareness

If you’re boating on Lake Travis or other local waterways, be sure to follow traffic laws. Remember, it’s just as illegal to drive a boat at high speeds as it is to drive a car. Make sure your boat’s lights and whistle are working properly. Remember to have a horn or siren if you are boating on a lake.
